WEEKLY USA GRAIN AND PROTEIN REPORT -- February 08, 2025

Nothing new to report this week on possible tariffs USA imports/exports on grains, oilseeds and protein meals.

USA corn prices were about USD 3 m/t lower on the week with soybeans finishing the week up by about USD 4 m/t while soymeal prices finished almost unchanged on the week. However, US winter wheat did rally by about USD 8 to 10 m/t with US spring wheat up by about USD 4 m/t.

There is still a lot of talk about possible grain tariffs but for this week it looks like the pending WASDE report has had more effect on prices.

Corn ending stocks in the WASDE are expected by the trade to move a little lower and there is concern over the lack of rainfall in Brazil and Argentina...it doesn't look much like there will be any weakness in corn prices. Mexico also officially removed the import ban on US GMO corn, as was expected.

US soybean prices slipped a little on Friday as rain was forecasted for parts of Argentina but not enough to overcome the dryness. Experts feel that the WASDE will show US ending stocks as just a little lower but not too exciting. Everyone is looking at South America for record soybean crops this year....perhaps soybean prices could move lower if the rainfall increases in Argentina.

The increase in US winter wheat prices this week seems to be related to the possibility of winterkill due to freezing temperatures and a limited amount of snow coverage. So far, there are no accurate number on the possible winterkill.

SECTION 2 --- FISHMEAL COMMENTS AND PRICES: PERUVIAN "INDICATION" FISHMEAL PRICES:

Fishing in the south of Peru is still chugging along with the total to date now up to 80,000 m/t which should yield almost 18,000 m/t of fishmeal and leave 171,000 m/t on the quota.

The Chinese New Year holidays have finished and everyone is back to work....well perhaps not everyone. New buying interest has been limited and trade reports say that there is no Super Prime fishmeal available in Peru but there is still Prime on hand --- but not much.

The next IMARPE cruise will be off in February for a month or six weeks and the trade is now speculating on when the next fishing season will begin --- April or May --- and what the quota will be.

The fishmeal market remains positive as success in the last fishing season still keeps everyone feeling quite content. There is lots of hope for another good season coming up.
