WEEKLY USA GRAIN AND PROTEIN REPORT December 18, 2021

This week seemed to be a little quieter than usual – perhaps due to upcoming holidays. For some, next week will only be a three day work week for Christmas followed by another short week for New Year. It is expected that new business will slack off quiet a bit and that the futures market daily volumes will be lower.

For this week we had continued strong prices for soymeal and soybeans --- pushed higher by reported and rumored new export sales. More soybean purchases by China and soyoil purchases by India made it look like soybean demand is just not going to drop – be it for export soybeans or for crushing.

Corn prices too moved a little higher on the week due to good export sales reports. This is the time of the year when USA corn should be the most competitive into world markets. Also, the US Grains Council released its US Corn Quality Report this week and the 2021 crop looks great on every factor. One can never be too sure on how much importance buyers put to this quality info, but they certainly shouldn't have any complaints about 2021 USA corn quality.

USA wheat prices were lower early in the week but seemed to find some strength as the week ended --- there is just too much world demand out there to allow wheat prices to slip much. As soon as wheat prices do weaken a little all the importing countries rush out with new tenders – just trying to save a buck or two.

Russian export tax – December 22 to 28 – wheat USD 94.00 m/t – up USD 3.00, barley USD 84.80 m/t – up USD 6.10 m/t and corn USD 55.00 m/t – up USD 0.60 m/t.

Prices for corn byproducts were mainly steady this week although there did seem to be a very wide spread in prices for corn gluten meal with a range of plus/minus USD 30 m/t depending on the exporter.

New export business slowed down quite a bit as everyone seems to be fully booked to the end of 2021 and into the first quarter of 2022.

DDGS FOB prices in the USA were steady to higher – up as much as USD 7 m/t from some shippers. New export business for DDGS was very slow and is expected to remain slow until we get into January.

Shippers are still complaining that it is very difficult to arrange any export container freight for byproducts and shipping lines are keeping rates high --- some say that rates are artificially high for grains as container lines would prefer other cargo.

Animal protein prices tried to move a little higher this week for business into Asia. Demand remains good but shipping logistics are still tough and supplies out of Australia and New Zealand are tight through January.

USA domestic business was slow this week as buyers are well covered into 2022 and are just sitting back for the balance of 2021.

While USA export prices remain steady there are some trade experts who feel that early 2022 could bring higher prices – especially for meat and bone meal. The expectation seems to be that the heavy supplies in the USA will get consumed and that export shipments will become easier as logistics improve. This possible added export demand could move prices higher through February.

SECTION 2 --- FISHMEAL COMMENTS AND PRICES: PERUVIAN

Peru fishing is still chugging along at 30,000 to 40,000 m/t of catch per day with the total now up to 1.55 million m/t which leaves just under 500,000 m/t still to land.

Export sales were reasonable active this week with trade reported sales up to 370,000 m/t which leaves less than 120,000 m/t of fishmeal unsold ---- not too much really.

No new details on November fishmeal exports but no one expectes any surprises as China will continue to be the main buyer. Asian buyers account for 92% of all sales with Europe (Germany) at about 5.0% --- Peru exports look to be about 1.16 million m/t so far in 2021 but will probably be higher as more November information is received.

Fishmeal prices are steady this week and no one seems to be expecting any change in prices at all for the next few weeks.
